

Comment From Columbia

By Henry W. Patterson.

Anent Conchies. . . .
New York City, Nov. 17.—Last Wednesday I read an item in the Daily which told of the suspension of McGill's sole conscientious objector. It simply said that he had been dealt with by university authorities. A curious feeling swept over me. To think that it might have been one of my best friends! But I argued with myself, what else could have been done? The answer was—nothing.

Perhaps you remember that several weeks ago I told of six theological students at Columbia who refused to register for the draft. They were arrested, but only after they had been given every consideration, only after the authorities had explained to them that registration did not mean active service for bona-fide objectors on religious grounds. They were brought to trial in Federal court. They were sentenced last Friday to one year in federal prison! They had been given every chance, but were irreconcilable. You can see why the authorities had to impose the penalty. And so six of my fellow-students become prisoners to serve as an example in a country preparing for war there must be unity, co-operation, and organization. This great neighbor of ours is resolved to achieve all these things, because England is waiting, and Hitler is watching!

We Canadians have nothing to kick about concerning compulsory training. When graduation-exercises are over next spring, many college-boys of America will begin a year of army life—a jolt to some; for all an experience.

Passive to active. . . .

For a while we all thought that athletics at McGill would be pretty feeble this year with the cancellation of all intercollegiate competition. But we were wrong! I believe this year will mark a turning point in general attitude toward sports. So many were previously content to be watchers, admirers of football heroes; although deep down in their hearts they wanted to become more active themselves. Before this year there were little or no attempts to foster mass participation in athletics. This lack was due in part to inadequate facilities. Now we have those facilities, we have more encouragement, and, as a result, a rise in interest. When the peace is won, McGill will produce greater teams than ever before in every branch of sport, providing she develops a systematic program of physical training in which each student, male or female, plays an active part.

Blind loyalty. . . .

That's what I show when I keep telling the boys down here that up at my alma mater the girls are twice as beautiful as they are at Columbia. Reactions are violent. Some laugh me to scorn; others, more intelligent, go stony-eyed and whisper longingly: "Tell me more." I do. Incidentally, girls, I am doing a remarkable bit of publicity on your behalf. If there should be a sudden influx of suspicious-looking males at McGill, watch out! That'll be the boys on the loose. Then if you girls ever come to N.Y. you won't have to worry about dates. All I ask is that you let me know a week or so in advance. That will give me time to arrange a series of boxing bouts. Am I mystifying you, dearies? You see, the moment I let the news leak out that a fair damsel is coming, the wolves will gather in the hall outside my door, each loudly claiming his right to the honor and the pleasure. And the only way of settling such a delicate question would be to have them meet on the (Continued on Page Four)

SOCIETY HEARS OF DESPOTISM IN GOVERNMENT

Alec Grigg Addresses St. James Literary Society

ATTACKS BUREAUCRATS

Speaker Is McGill Graduate and Westmount City Official

"Despotism within the Democratic System," was the subject of an address delivered last night by Mr. Alec P. Grigg, B.A., B.C.L., before the St. James Literary Society. Mr. Grigg is a graduate of McGill University, and is now an official of the City of Westmount. The speech dealt mainly with the usurpation of power by bureaucrats in normal times of peace.

"In some of its features democracy smacks of other more obnoxious forms of government," the speaker declared. Today the government has undertaken many social services which require special departments and functionaries. Because of these new agencies and their wide scope, new safeguards for democracy must be found.

Quotes Lord Hewart

Mr. Grigg then touched upon certain points brought out by Lord Hewart in his new book, "The New Despotism." The Judge condemns the bureaucrats of the government for usurping the powers of Parliament and the law courts. The speaker said that the executive has come into conflict with individualism. Servants of the Crown used to be liable to litigation, but now are protected by various means against appeals by the people from their decisions.

Canadian Situation Worse

"The Canadian situation," Mr. Grigg declared, "is worse than in England because here we have ten governments to nibble at the individual."

Mr. Grigg then named two things that would reform the situation. He said that some people advocate a standing committee of the legislature to examine and thus eliminate certain objectionable features from certain acts. Furthermore, people should see to it that democracy is protected and fought for not only in time of war, but during peace.

In closing Mr. Grigg quoted James Hilton: "Democracy requires the service of its adherents as well as its praise."

SOCIALIZED MEDICINE TOPIC OF DISCUSSION

"Socialized Medicine" in all its phases will be the topic of discussion at the third gathering of the Political Economy Club to be held at 8:00 tomorrow evening in the Union Grill Room. The discussion will be led by Dr. Grant Fleming of the faculty of medicine, while the speakers are to be John Randolph and R. Galpin. The question of whether women are to be allowed as members will again be brought up.

The next meeting, to be held December 12th, will have as its speakers J. Friedlander and J. R. Swan. The subject will be "Distribution of National Income."

Cosmopolitan Club To Hear Laviolette

The regular meeting of the Cosmopolitan Club will be held tomorrow in Douglas Hall. Professor Forrest La Violette of the Department of Sociology will be the guest speaker. The title of the talk will be "Research in Race Relations." There will be a short program of entertainment, and refreshments will be served during the intermission. Dancing until midnight will conclude the evening.

The Chair will be taken by Stewart Jamieson of the Engineering Faculty. The Entertainment Committee invites all members and others interested to attend.

PRE-MEDS HEAR DR. THOMPSON

Talk to Take Place Tomorrow in Union Grill Room

Address Will Feature the Significance of Bio-chemistry in Medical Education

Dr. D. L. Thompson, professor of Bio-chemistry at McGill University, will address the Pre-Medical Society on the subject "Bio-chemistry in Medical Education" at 5:00 tomorrow in the Grill Room of the Union.

The speaker of the evening is known in university circles, for besides being a professor of bio-chemistry, he is chairman of the Biological Sciences, a member of the medical faculty, and a graduate of Aberdeen and Cambridge Universities. Dr. Thompson holds the degrees of M.A., Ph.D., and F.R.S.C.

Pre-Medical Society pins have been ordered and are expected to arrive in about two weeks. However, anyone who still wishes to procure a pin and has not yet paid, may bring his or her money to the meeting tomorrow and one will be ordered.

Tonight the first St. John's Ambulance session for Pre-Meds will meet at 5:00 in the Union Grill Room.

MAJOR FIELD SAYS BAND IS IMPROVING

Commends Members of McGill Band at Practice Last Night

Last evening, Major A. T. Field, M.C. and Lt. W. A. Clark of the McGill Reserve Training Battalion attended the weekly practice of the McGill Band. After the band practice, the Major stated that he was very pleased with the band's performance, and that in his opinion the present band could well be the nucleus of one comparable with the best in the city. Lt. Clark also commended the members on their performance. He pointed out that he had been listening to the various bands at McGill since 1919, and that the present one, he thought, was as good as any.

The turn-out at the band-practice last night was greater than at the last. However, James Kerr, the band-master of the McGill Band, stressed that there were still not sufficient members to provide an adequate band for outdoor marching. It was pointed out that the Vickers Boy Scout Band, which at the recent Church Parade turned out nearly forty members all playing brass instruments, could not be heard at the extremes of the parade. This would show that the McGill Band, which at present comprises only about thirty brass and reed instruments, needs considerable augmentation to be of use. The band-master hopes that the turn-out at the next practice, on Tuesday, November 28th, will be even better than that of last evening. New members especially are invited to attend.

Council, Key, Red Wing Posts to Be Filled Dec. 3

Miss Heasley and G. H. Fletcher Receive Nominations—Deadline Is Set for Tomorrow

With elections to positions of the Students' Executive Council and Scarlet Key Society only two weeks away, nominations to these posts, in order to appear on the ballots, must be handed in by 2:30 p.m. tomorrow.

Elections to the Red Wings Society will be held concurrently with the Council and Scarlet Key elections, and nominations in this case must be in by 4 o'clock tomorrow. One of the representatives of each year must reside in R.V.C. The latter names are to be handed in to Miss Heasley at the McGill Union, while G. H. Fletcher, Secretary-Treasurer of the Students' Society, must receive the former before the appointed time.

The positions to be filled on the Executive Council are those of Faculty Representatives, and nominees must be students of the Junior Year. Each faculty, including Arts and Science, Engineering, Commerce, Medicine, Law, Dentistry, Theology, and R.V.C. These nominations must be in writing and signed by at least ten undergraduates from the faculty which the nominee is to represent.

Representatives to the Red Wing's Society include two representatives each from the first three years R.V.C., and one from the McGill School of Physical Education. In this case nominations must be signed by 15 members of the M.W.S.A.A.

Nominees for the Scarlet Key honorary society are in two categories. "A" category includes four from Arts and Science, three or more from Commerce, two or more from Law, and one or more from Dentistry and Architecture. Category "B" nominees must all be second year students, and there must be three nominees from each faculty to be represented, including Arts and Science, Engineering, Dentistry, Medicine, and Commerce.

EXPERTS SHOW METTLE IN QUIZ

Professors Remain Invincible Alter Classical Bombardment

'Information Please' Enacted at Classical Club Meeting Last Night

Seated at a table in poses strikingly reminiscent of the experts of "Information Please," Professors McCullagh, Woodhead, and Beare last night were "stumped" only three times by the questions of members of the Classical Club.

A feature of the hour-long "quiz" was the fact that Professor Woodhead's knowledge extended to the comic strips as well as to the depths of classical learning. He alone of the experts identified "Tools" as the consort of "Caspar." The other experts mistook the examiner's pronunciation and answered for "Castor."

Professor Woodhead also proved himself the Oscar Levant of the quiz, coming up with the correct answers to classical music problems. Religion also was a subject of questioning. All three professors proved themselves to be on familiar ground when Biblical lore was under discussion.

To the surprise of the assembly, the experts successfully identified the present European struggle as the Fourth Punic War, Mussolini as its leader and Britain as the modern Carthage.

At mathematical problems, the professors were not so adept, especially when pencils and paper were ruled out.

Greek authors were correctly identified from first lines of their plays, despite the pronunciation of Stanley A. Smith, Club President, who was in the chair.

Mlle. de Miradel Addresses Women

De Gaulle's Former Secretary to Speak on Her Experiences in France

Sponsored by the Program Committee of the Women's Union, Mlle. de Miradel, former confidential secretary to General De Gaulle, will address women students at 5 o'clock next Wednesday, November 27, in the R.V.C. Common Room.

Mlle. de Miradel announced last night that she had no definite title for her talk, but her intention is to speak on her experiences in France before and during that country's downfall, "because I want to re-live them," she said. The chairman of the committee, which was set up last year, remarked that students who heard Madeleine Carroll's address will find Mlle. de Miradel's an interesting contrast, as the latter saw what was

DR. ROSCOE TO ATTEND SOCIAL

Seniors Will Hold Social Evenings

First Meeting of Graduating Students Set for Friday Night

Dr. Roscoe, warden of R.V.C., will address all senior women students at a Social Evening to be held on Friday night, November twenty-second, at eight-fifteen in the R.V.C. Reading Room. All senior co-eds in Arts, Commerce, and Science are invited to attend.

This gathering introduces a series of such evenings to be held during the present session. The girls are asked by the executive to bring their Red Cross knitting. Bridge games have been arranged for those who prefer to play and a variety of other games will be played. Refreshments will be served at the end of the evening. The executive feels that these evenings will afford a pleasant opportunity for the graduates of R.V.C. to meet as a class, and all seniors will be welcomed.

McGILL GRADUATE CHOSEN ALDERMAN

Hugh Crombie, Former President of Graduates Society, Named

The Montreal Branch of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association unanimously chose Hugh Crombie, a former president of the McGill Graduates' Society, for one of the three councillors which the association will send to the City Hall December 9th, under the revised city charter.

Mr. Crombie, who was born in Michigan in 1896 of Canadian parents, came to Montreal at an early age. He studied engineering at McGill, but left college at the outbreak of the World War and served overseas in the Canadian Engineers as a lieutenant. In 1917 he was invalided home and returned to college to complete his engineering course. He graduated in 1918.

Mr. Crombie, who has been an active member of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association for the past eight years, is assistant manager of the Dominion Engineering company at Lachine.

Undergrads Act as Guides Saturday; Speakers' Program Is Arranged

A parade of students and a special speakers' program will be features of the University of Montreal Visiting Day, to be held next Saturday at the new University buildings, it was announced last night by Pierre Gendron, Secretary of the Students' Society of the University.

M. Charbonneau, of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, is in charge of the Speaker's Program, and has arranged a panel of several prominent persons in the Government.

The Parade of Students will begin at the old University buildings on St. Denis at 2 o'clock, and will proceed to the new establishment on the back of the mountain, where students, visitors, and the Faculty will assemble in the Main Hall of the Arts and Science Building.

About 100 students will act as guides for the public, who will be admitted to the new buildings from 3 o'clock Saturday. They will exhibit the work of the different departments, and photographs of the university will be on display.

"The Visiting Day has been organized so as to arouse public interest in the University, and to get their support of the campaign to have the buildings finished," said M. Gendron.

Two prizes of fifteen and ten dollars will be awarded. All four students will receive a year's subscription to the Engineering Journal and a student membership in the Institute.

The two McGill students, V. O. Griffin and W. C. Brown, will present respectively, "Manufacture of Modern Refrigerators" and "Construction of Boulder Dam."

The general secretary of the Engineering Institute, in addressing the second year engineers on Monday afternoon, invited the students to join the Institute and stressed the advantages of membership.

A motion picture, "Liquid Air," will be shown and refreshments will be served. All students, especially those in engineering, are invited to attend.

Chess Exhibit Causes Furor At Redpath
Armies in Ivory Vies on Classic Fields
by R. G. R.

All lovers of "Ye Game and Play of Chess" are rushing over to the Redpath Library, where a chess exhibit is being shown. The main feature is an ornamental chess set which is set up on an ancient looking chess-board. It is a popularized version of the finest and most precious set in existence, made for the Chinese Tao Kwang, and a picture is shown of the original. The pawns are Chinese footmen with broad swords; the rooks are elephants arrayed for battle; the knights are warriors on horseback, one of which, as set up, is shown retreating at full speed; and the kings, queens and bishops are realistic miniatures.

There are also pictures of sets, unusual for their form, colour, age and value, which come from India, Turkey, Java, Africa and other lands. These are made of glass, ivory, marble, painted wood or quartz and their colours vary from all shades of pink to greens.

There are some books on playing chess, including an ancient treatise in Old English print and others of modern vintage written by masters at the game. These are part of the collection which the library possesses.

It caused much surprise and consternation at the Library yesterday, when on three separate occasions, students had fits of apoplexy while looking at the chess exhibit. The matter was cleared up, however, when it was found out that they were members of the McGill Chess Club who had noticed that the chessmen were set up incorrectly. This was quickly rectified.

Chess is not the slow, prosaic game it is generally thought to be, nor are the players always meek and mild. The truth of this statement would be quite apparent to you if you should happen to be in the Union Reading Room, for you would see these chess-players glaring fiercely at each other or at the little blobs of wood on the chess-table, as they sit there working out their opponents. At times they break out into physical violence, such as the time when an about-to-be-defeated player deliberately upsets the board. The winning player then saw red, leaped upon his opponent and pummeled him. The assailant, finding his opponent a worthy match at fistfights, in desperation picked up a pawn and threw it with such fury that it pierced the other's forehead and slew him.

UNION TO HOLD HOP ON SATURDAY NIGHT

The Union ballroom will be the scene of an informal dance, Sat. Nov. 23rd, at 9 p.m. Blake Sewell and his orchestra will be in attendance. Tickets at $1.00 per couple are on sale at the Union Tuckshop. These should be purchased early as the Union House Committee has announced that their number is limited.

Request numbers will be played by the orchestra and refreshments will be sold at the Union Cafeteria.

Blake Sewell will once again serenade the Junior Prom with his "Knights of the Knot" when Sir Arthur Currie Memorial Gymnasium witnesses the first campus formal of the year on Friday, December 13th. The date had been tentatively arranged for the 6th, but it has been found necessary to postpone the event for a week.

The committee, headed by George Clarke of Law, has sent the final details, and, for the most part, the arrangements for the affair are now definite. The price is to be $4.00 per couple, tax included, and supper will be served cabaret style.

Cabaret Theme
Since the Prom this year will for the first time desert its old stomping grounds and will come home to the campus itself, special pains are being taken to ensure its success. The floor will be arranged in imitation of a cabaret, and tables are to be placed around the walls leaving the centre of the room free for dancing.

A certain amount of consternation has been felt around the campus over the condition of the dance floor after the new boots of the R.T.B. do their level best to abuse it. But, foreseeing this contingency, the committee has already arranged for the surfacing of the floor and believes, accordingly, that no anxiety need be felt.

So far as entertainment is concerned, no professional talent will be engaged. Instead it has been felt that amateur talent selected from around the college will harmonize more with the intention of the committee to preserve a true college atmosphere.

Collegiate Atmosphere.

The decoration committee is scheduled to meet tomorrow night to take care of all final arrangements. Plans for decorative effects so far include the draping of the walls with university flags salvaged from football games of yore. Furthermore, a huge red and white canopy will overhang the dance floor and add to the gaiety of the atmosphere besides serving the practical purpose of restricting echoes of Blake Sewell's rhythmic cavortings.

Alleviating another cause of anxiety, the prom committee is providing special wrap-rooms and there will be nothing to stand in the way between a co-ed and the opportunity to powder her nose.

Posters will soon appear around the campus and in the various faculty buildings, and tickets will go on sale in about a week.

Gazette Tour Tonight

The following people, who said that they would be free on Wednesday nights will be conducted on a tour of the Gazette next Wednesday. Please meet at the Daily office at 9 p.m. Bishop, Villiers, Davidson, Giget, Glickman, Rodgers, Russell, Coleman, Schiller. Any other reporters wishing to go on this tour should get in touch with Kitty Havertfield. Everyone else who signed the list in the Daily office will go the following Thursday.

Student Advisers

Many unfavourable comments have appeared in the past regarding the student advisory system at McGill, but as yet little, if anything has been done to remedy the most obvious drawbacks to the system.

At the beginning of his freshman year every student is assigned a member of the instructional staff as an adviser. He or she may, after some weeks, find his way to the professor's office in answer to an urgent notice. Since the professor is a busy man, the interview which follows is usually a brief one and the student leaves with a feeling of relief when the interview is over. He leaves little the wiser except for such scattered particles of wisdom as the professor sees fit to impart to him over the smoke of his pipe. Instead of the student it is usually the professor who obtains the information.

The professors do their best to help their advisees whenever they possibly can, but since as a rule it is very difficult for the advisee to contact his adviser, the former soon turns to fellow students for advice, such as they can give him, or does the best he can by himself. The results are not always satisfactory.

The present plan appears to be a vicious circle. The professors, already short of time, have too many advisees and hence they cannot possibly deal with the definite and individual problems of each advisee effectively. The advisee feeling that he receives very little from his interviews dispenses with them altogether where possible and so renders the system completely ineffective.

It has been suggested in the past that an advisory board composed of senior students should be set up. Students would be more likely to know the problems which confront other students and there would be a closer and more informal association between the two. The whole could easily be supervised by a few professors to whom the seniors could report as to the progress of their advisees.

While there are drawbacks to this suggested system in that the seniors might not be able to spare the necessary time, or that they might be able to have too great control over their advisees, nevertheless a satisfactory solution might easily be worked out. Certainly a system can be devised which is better than the one under which freshmen are being advised at present.

The alternatives seem clear. Either the present system of student advisers must be improved, or it should be discarded completely and substituted by an entirely new one.

War Savings

Commendable indeed was the recent action of the Engineering Undergraduate Society in deciding to purchase Canadian Government War Bonds with their surplus funds. Other Faculties in the university with credit bank balances can take advantage of this lead on the part of the Engineers and use their surplus funds in a similar manner. That students must bend every effort towards assisting in the war effort is obvious. That a simple method exists, well within the means of everyone for providing concrete aid to our war effort should be recognized.

A committee was recently set up by the Students' Executive Council for the express purpose of facilitating the sale of War Savings Stamps on the campus. Advantage should be taken of this new opportunity of adding to the Government war-chest. May we suggest that the prizes which are to be given by McGill clubs and societies for the balance of the year be handed out in the form of War Savings Stamps, and that various organizations on the campus take the lead offered by the Engineers and aid the purchase of War Savings in one form or another.

MUSIC NOTES

GREAT PERFORMANCE OF BRAHMS CONCERTO

The matchless Polish pianist Artur Rubinstein appeared as soloist last night with Les Concerts Symphoniques de Montreal conducted by Desire Defauw. His performance of the B Minor Concerto by Johannes Brahms turned out to be a highlight in the recent music history of this city.

Rubinstein's treatment of this work is well-nigh legendary. We keep remembering a rave comment about a Rubinstein performance of the Brahms by the staid and erudite English critic James Agate—higher praise was never afforded any artist by an otherwise sane and sober writer.

But Artur Rubinstein is so brilliant and admirable a performer that extravaganzas of praise are never wasted on this master. He has the happy faculty of making a piano sing; delicately or majestically, the voice of Rubinstein's piano speaks as eloquently as any we have heard. Phrases are enunciated with a wealth of shading, magically drawn from the least flexible of instruments. His interpretation last night was authoritative and scintillating at the same time. His playing of the intricate rhythms with which Brahms has filled this work recalls the peerless pianism of Vladimir Horowitz. Rhythms are set forth uniquely—for what appeared artificial on paper has been given life, and seems as unobtrusively natural as Newton's laws of Gravity.

As much a symphony as a concerto, even extending to four movements, there is little bravura in this intensely poetic masterpiece from Brahms' pen. Maestro Defauw's sufficiently sensitive reading accepted the piano as an eloquent instrument in the orchestra but gave the soloist proper prominence in the more dramatic passages.

The concert opened with a precise and moving performance of Beethoven's Overture to "Egmont." A novelty item was introduced in "La Peri" by the late Paul Dukas. It is a romantic program piece in the modern French idiom featuring highly interesting instrumentation. The mood is one of ephemeral, shimmering beauty captivatingly elicited by M. Defauw.

The closing group consisted of four selections from Wagner: "Forest Murmurs" from Siegfried and the "Rhine Journey" and "Funeral March" from Gotterdammerung; closing with the Overture to Die Meistersinger. This music went well on the whole except for some painful lapses in the brass section—notably poor intonation and jagged tone from the trombone.

At the next concert on December 3, the distinguished British musician and conductor of the London Philharmonic Orchestra, Sir Thomas Beecham, will conduct. The program is to include symphonies by Mozart and Sibelius.

Heads and Tales

TALES WITHOUT COPYRIGHTS

Two of the following stories are connected with McGill names, so they should prove of interest to at least those persons concerned. I imagine the Principal will never forget one in which he was the main actor.

This is of rather recent origin. Dr. James was speaking in a town near Sherbrooke, Sherbrooke, for those who don't know, is a city of somewhat over thirty thousand people, and is the biggest centre in the district. It's the big town to all the rural and village folk who populate these counties. Before Dr. James spoke he was privately introduced to several farmers from the district.

One red-faced, red-haired fellow on meeting the Principal extended a muscular right arm and heartily shaking Dr. James' hand said, "Pleased to meet you, sir. What's the name?"

A second, on being introduced came out with, "How do you do, sir. Are you from Sherbrooke?"

No kidding! I was there. If you don't believe me, ask the Principal.

PRACTICAL JOKE 1880 A.D.

Joe Brady was a middle-aged man before the Troubled Century blew into Time. He ran a general store but the chief things he dispensed were practical jokes. There is one about the time Joe had a barrel of salt herring that he was selling at ten cents a dozen. Into the store walked Miles Colton, who had a farm about three miles from Joe's place. Miles was a mild little Donald Meek sort of man. He ordered a dozen herring and Joe playfully wrapped up eleven and took the dime. Miles got into his wagon and drove home. There Mrs. Colton's count revealed the discrepancy. So Miles reharnessed the team and drove back to town with his package.

"I bought a dozen herring and there's one missing," Joe took the package and still thinking of practical jokes changed the number and handed it back to Miles. And back goes Miles to the Missus.

"Miles," said the fifty-one percent of the family, "There's only ten now." Miles reharnessed the team and drove back to Brady's. He was slightly peeved.

"Look, Joe," he whined, "I bought a dozen herring and you only gave me eleven. I came back and told you there were one missing and when I got home there were only ten. Now, Joe..."

"Did you say one missing last time?" Brady was deadpan.

"Why, yes, Joe."

"One missing," said Joe. "Why I thought you said there was one too many, so I took one out."

WHO'S LEW?

I've always had good luck in hitch-hiking because I use the best techniques. Techniques depend on where you are and where you want to go. You have to adapt yourself. I had a fool-proof method for getting out of one town, but I can't write it down. There might be repercussions. Use of this technique enabled me to become the first hitch-hiker ever given a ride by a couple in a beautiful car from Virginia, or was it West Virginia? After the owner had moved his luggage to make room for me, we started talking. The wife said, "That's marvellous!" to practically everything I said. We got talking about McGill. I asked if McGill was known where they came from. The husband said yes.

"Lew was up there for some time, wasn't he dear?" inquired the wife in southern tones. "Why, yes," replied the husband. "Lew spent some time there."

The wife turned to me. "You must have known Lew, I suppose?"

How should I know a Lew?

"What was his full name?" I asked, feeling as if I should have known better.

"Why, Lewis Douglas, he was principal for a while," she smilingly replied.

Oh, so that's he. Yes, I'd seen Lew about.

A TALL TAIL

A group of farmers were discussing some of their narrow escapes from death. One mentioned how he had fallen from a hay mow in his barn into the feed hole, and had only been stopped by his shoulders getting in the way. His arms were sore for several days. The tales then started to veer from the truth and accordingly became more interesting.

"When I was very young," began one farmer. "I had very rosy cheeks and for that reason was never let within sight of the bull. One day however the bull saw my rosy cheeks and dashed after me. I turned on my heels and ran. I bumped into a tree and could go no further. The chase had made me redder and the bull came on more furiously. But it happened that I brushed against a bee on a flower and the bee stung me. I became purple with rage, and the bull just stopped in his tracks and walked away."

"That's nothing," said another farmer. "Once when I was shingling the roof of my barn I slipped and fell over backwards."

"What did you do?" I inquired.

"Well," he said, "As I went over backwards I hammered two nails through my coat tail and that saved me!"

Adventures in an Art Gallery

No one word has been used in art of the modern era to mean more things at once and separately than the adjective, "synthesiastic." One of the oldest saying in criticism of any sort has been, "By their adjectives shall you know them." And so do we here try to "know" those who use the adjective "synthesiastic."

For those who have read the nuances comprehensively in "A Rebours" of Huysmans, the picture painted there of the Count des Esseintes is the elementary illustration for this type of philosophy. During early attempts such as this to play with moods in subtlety of phrase, cadence, and dynamism of expression, a type of hero was being moulded into form as the representation of the super-being exquisitely removed from all coarse and plodding "cess-pool fillers" who followed their monotony of travail into a monotony of soul. This superior creature was superiorly gifted with acute sensitiveness, ecstatically appreciative of the infinite subtleties in one shade of yellow and vastly familiar with the realm of literature in breathtaking sort of a way.

The question was never whether one was born with but five senses, but whether by pattern of intertwining the senses in various fashions one could finally achieve the fulfillment of the long-standing yearning for many other senses. For some fortunate few, the artisans of the Arts maintained, these already obtained in an evolution by Nature of the synthesiastic. Despite the unfortunate self-esteem these held themselves in, being unlike other men as by having to smell or hear a colour at the same time they saw a colour, all philosophies were turned so that admiration replaced consolation.

Could those not so fortunately endowed share the experience of exaltation with the new dimensions released from restrictive and "commonplace Nature?" The theories of harmonic resonance in sound were invoked to bless those not otherwise blessed. Those sensory perceptions which were powerfully received would influence resonant senses. Nor would the resonant mood be the same.

Later it was admitted that the fund of conscious experiences, something akin to Arch Oboler's popularizing conception of "stream of consciousness" was the precipitating factor of major proportions. The resolution of the problem now became one within the grasp of those willing to do the grasping. One only had to let one's fund of consciousness flow under the stress of one sensation. If, for example, under the stress of R's music one heard Beowulf's epic sagas, then when reading Beowulf, the process is reversibly potent. With this elementary axiom in mind, a whole system of logic was built up.

If the music of R—brought on certain re-

Well, What's Going On?

The Editor, McGill Daily, Montreal.

Sir: Presumably this university of ours is a democratic institution. Naturally we fully expect the various clubs on this campus to conduct themselves along the same democratic lines. Furthermore, we expect these clubs to stand on the public statements they have made. No doubt most of the clubs on this campus, being run in a straightforward manner, do this. But, as the old cliché goes, there is always a fly in the ointment. The Psychological Club, by their elections of November 7th, proved themselves beyond any question to be this fly.

In Tuesday's "Daily" (Nov. 5th) a notice appeared to the effect that this so-called club was holding an open meeting—open to all interested in psychology. This, to all outward appearances, was an honest invitation. Approximately seventy engineers went to some trouble in order to accept this invitation and attend the meeting for the purpose of finding out just what use psychology could be to them. They were not given a chance to find out. They were shanghaied forthwith to another room, for their presence, as the President himself pointed out, "upset the delicate sexual balance of the sensitive women members." This is absolute balderdash, as anyone can easily ascertain. From the President's statement it would seem that this club is a puny assortment (there were not ten present when the engineers arrived) of neurotic individuals who are so upset by the presence of their own guests, so utterly confused, that they stall, beat around the bush, make numerous meaningless remarks and protests and finally waltz on their own invitation by terminating the meeting until the Engineers are forced to leave. Recently a childishly sarcastic description of this meeting, warped beyond any recognition, appeared in the "Daily," coupled with an announcement that the club's executive had been elected. Behind closed doors, in a neurotic frenzy, no doubt, by the afore-mentioned insignificant little group. This reeks of the cheap rail-roading tactics employed in the Banana Republics.

The Psychological Club, it would appear from the foregoing, is a small, self-centred, shabby clique—and not a club in any sense of the word. It is the type of organization which should not be tolerated on the campus. We trust that this sort of cheap trick will not occur again.

Yours,

William S. Piper (Eng. 11),
Paul Boire (Eng. 11),
Malcolm B. Crevar (Eng. 11).

1915.

The Fourth University Company set a unique endurance record. They marched ten miles and immediately following had an inter-platoon relay race. Dr. Katherine Travis of the class of '95 rather than desert the wounded Serbians in her care, along with nearly all of the staff of Lady Ralph Paget's Hospital, voluntarily fell into the hands of the Serbians.

1925.

Bliss Carman, the Canadian poet, arrived in Montreal to take his place as a temporary member on the staff of the University. Medicine won the Wood Trophy from Science in a hectic contest by a 15-4 score.

The Department of Germanics announced that it will not give any repeat performances of its plays and that McGill is the only Canadian university to produce such plays.

Airmen Down Sailors 8-0; Keay and Stronach Star

Costly Fumble Recovered by Marshall Nets Major Score

Making the most of the opportunities that presented themselves and playing heads-up football throughout the entire contest, the Air Force football aggregation scored an 8-0 triumph over the Navy outfit yesterday, and with the victory went along the McGill Football Championship. Played under wintry conditions and paced by Jack Keay, their brilliant punter, the Airmen were at their best in the rough going.

FUMBLES RECOVERED.

Numerous fumbles occurred during the course of the game, but these can be accounted for by the condition of Molson Stadium which was covered with a few inches of snow. Each team were quick to recover most of their miscues, but a disastrous fumble by the Navy quarterback in the last period accounted for the only major score of the contest. Harry Marshall gathered up the loose ball behind the Sailors goal line to give his team their final points. The convert from placement was unsuccessful. The other three points were made in the first half, when the fliers roused the tars twice and Keay kicked a touch in goal.

Both teams concentrated on line smashes for the greater part of the game, and only with a few minutes to go did the play open up. Then the sailors turned to the air in an attempt to get close, and on one of their passes, Dick Pare intercepted and ran 35 yards for a score, that fortunately for the Sailors was called back on the off-side. Pare played a standout game for the Fliers, and his line-bucks were a feature of the contest.

BLOCKED KICK.

A blocked kick resulted in the first point of the game as the Airmen were quick to rouse Bob Stronach's smothered punt. A determined Air Force drive resulted in their second point when Keay lifted a kick to Ward Byington who was roused. Keay kept up his fine booting, and the period was just about completed as Johnson knifed his way for a nice gain through the Navy line.

An exchange of kicks opened the second quarter, but in a short time the airmen were again in a scoring position as Stronach kicked poorly from his own goal line. Pare on a faked buck skirted the Navy right end and galloped to the Sailors' 15 yard mark. After two line tries by Wallace, Keay ran the count to 3-0 with Byington being again roused. Simpson showed some fine plunging for Buster Fletcher's team during this quarter, but Keay made up the difference as he consistently got some long hoists away. Just prior to half time a quick forward, Shuger to Stronach, netted the Tars 25 yards which was the best forward attempt of the game.

BYINGTON HURT.

An injury to quarter Byington occurred almost before the third period got under way, but the plucky field general was back in the game after a few minutes rest. The quarter was marked with two McGill's "Snow Bowl" was the scene of a don't-bother-to-tackle-him-he'll-do-a-cartwheel football game yesterday afternoon as the Air Force lads in crimson turned back the blue tide. (Say, aren't we getting these colours mixed?) A huge crowd of some fifty hardy souls turned out to watch the carnage. Well, it was a huge throng compared to the usual number of spectators. The gridiron, covered with snow, proved a slippery proposition and made broken field running hazardous. One co-ed was overheard offering this gem, "The boys look swell against the white background. I think the colour combination is marvelous." Well, that's one consolation boys. You contrasted well.

Seriously though, it was a darn good game considering the weather conditions. Air Force coach "Stu" Smith remarked thusly himself, adding "The teams were evenly matched. Navy played a good game and we were fortunate to win." The boys in blue did put up a great defense, but their attack, though sporty at times, was never a serious threat. The Fliers capitalized on every break to score six of their eight points.

Keay's kicking was one of Air Force's major weapons. It accounted for two rouges and indirectly for the only touchdown. It was also a good protection against the occasional Navy assault. Big Dick Pare showed up well in every department, plunging hard, intercepting passes, and backing up the line. Did anyone notice McGibbon's dramatic swan dive? Must be he's getting his seasons mixed. Navy's starry Byington also tasted Pare's weight when they met head on, but Ward came right back to finish the game going strong. Bob Stronach and Jim Simpson also played effective games.

What the boys thought about it:

Frankie Windsor (captain): "We were in there fighting the whole way. Don't underrate the navy."

Dick Pare: "We had to do it for Stu."

Air Force Plunge to Victory

This picture, taken yesterday at the Navy-Air Force play-off, shows the airmen in one of their typical plunges which helped considerably towards their final victory. In the foreground Marshall (22) makes an attempt to stop Navy's McCallum (16) as he heads in towards the centre of action, where Victor is starting his plunge in the left centre of the picture. Just behind him Air Force's Wallace tries to stop Armstrong (22) who has slipped around the right end.

BASKETBALL RESULTS

Platoon 4 vs. Platoon 18

At 5 p.m. yesterday, Ptn. 18 defeated Ptn. 4 in a hard fought tilt by the score of 37-10. Taylor and Burrows netted top points for the victors, while Walters starred for the losing quintet. There was a good turnout for both teams, and play was fast until the last whistle.

Platoon 27 vs. Platoon 16

Since Ptn. 16 did not show up, the game went to Ptn. 27 by default. A pick-up team was formed so that the practice was not missed.

Platoon 23 vs. Platoon 3

This game was postponed because one of the fives had drill during the time scheduled for the meeting.

Platoon 21 vs. Platoon 12

Leonards starred for the winners, Ptn. 21, having bagged thirteen points. The score was 27 to 18, and the play was so hotly contested that at times fisticuffs were imminent. However the fine sporting spirit of the players prevented this.

Election of Officers, Dancing, Feature Ski Club Meeting

The snow is on the ground, and it is time to take the faithful hickories out of the cellar and give them the once over with the 'super special XXX' wax! However, the skiing season will not be officially opened at McGill until this evening, when the Outing Club will hold its opening meeting of the semester in the Union Ballroom at 8:00 P.M.

The M.O.C. has a very full program planned, and the attendance of all is expected, if past meetings of the Club are any criterion. President Lorne Lindsey will call the meeting to order at 8:00 p.m. sharp, and the election of officers to those posts left open by the enlistment of former officials in the Armed Services will follow. Two excellent movies featuring many star skiers, including Hannes Schneider, will then be shown. The titles are 'F.I.S. Skiers' and 'Skiing With Hannes Schneider.' These films will be shown at 9:00 p.m., and for the special benefit of those coeds who will be occupied with the First Aid course in the early part of the evening, these movies will be shown over again at 10 p.m. The executive hope that the girls will appreciate this consideration, and attend in large numbers. Of course, the coeds who can attend on time, are expected to do so.

DANCING TO FOLLOW.

To add to the festivities, Lorne Lindsay announced, a nickelodeon has been rented, completed with Both companies were well represented, and although the floor was covered with other badminton enthusiasts who were not playing in the M.R.T.B. league, the matches were completed quite early in the evening.

Also taking part on the floor, were approximately sixty players, co-eds included, which brought the total to eighty. The badminton committee intends to divide the seven companies into two sections of three and four teams respectively. Points will be awarded to each company participating, the winner receiving 10 points and the loser 5.

The results of last night's competition are as follows:

When the lights were turned on, one onlooker observed: "All we need now is a heating system." In spite of the froideur, two freaks were seen jaunting briskly around the track without anything on. Well, not much anyway. Freshmen, doubtlessly.

That just about winds up the McGill football season, although there are rumours of some sort of exhibition game. The boys are going to celebrate the close of the season by rolling out the barrel, according to certain authoritative sources. So everybody is happy about the whole thing, including Doug Kerr, who commented, "It was a fine game and a good conclusion to a successful season."

Hall intercepted an Air Force pass and Keith Scobie almost made yards with a nice plunge as the quarter ended. The last period brought the final points of the game. After steadily advancing down field with the rather short punts of the Sailor kicker compared to Keay, Harry Marshall sped into the Navy goal line to fall on a loose ball that Byington fumbled and gave his team the only touch of the game.

For the winners, Keay and Pare were outstanding with MacFarlane turning in a good job at quarter. Byington, Simpson and Stronach were best for losers. The officials handled the game admirably, and they had some tough plays to call.

SQUAD LEADERS

For the past two or three weeks the Squad Leaders have been diligently practising their fundamental movements on all pieces of apparatus and at the beginning of this week commenced their first of a series of tests. Already a number of them have passed the tests on the Flying Rings, Vaulting Box and Horizontal Bar and before the week is out many more will follow suit.

In order to keep the presentation of Crests to Squad Leaders on the same high level as other University Athletic Awards a rather stiff series of tests has been drawn up and those who are successful in passing them will really deserve the honour to be bestowed upon them.

Each test has been gone over carefully by the Athletic Department and will receive the official approval of the "Awards Committee" of the Students Athletic Council before being finally adopted. These tests include the following items:

(1) Grade A or B in the Efficiency Tests now being given to the members of the M.R.T.B. This includes Running, Jumping, Climbing and Throwing.

(2) Good performance of FUNDAMENTAL movements on the following pieces of apparatus: Low Bar, High Bar, Parallel Bars, Side Horse, Vaulting Box and Mats.

On the contrary the infinite system of fluxes in themes gave not one fixed work of art, but many arts in one work! Fluidity of form followed the vein of logic here. In music no longer was the "syrupy crutch" of melody required! No, this was the manna of the puerile. Rhythm and atonality were the new colours, and the velocity of suggestive moods per bar of music increased with gyrating rity. Soon the audience of comprehending souls grew more and more restricted. In this competition to exalt one's superiority new moods were built before the

THAT MAN.

I might use strict poetic diction And thus avoid all sorts of friction. I might use purely rhythmic phrases And thus in poetry could go places. Trees, breeze, knees, sneeze—all that sort of thing.

Hair, fair, dare, bare—they all have that ring. I could rival Coleridge and John Keats, Shock the world with my wondrous feats.

Instead I sit with grimy pen, To satisfy that man's yen. That man who caused me this distress That man who works with cruel finesse.

"You write a poem," he barked at me And here I am you plainly see. He drove afar my thoughts of fame And caused my head to bow in shame.

No time to think, no time to muse, Just write a poem that will amuse. A poem that will make students laugh But if it fails—I get the gaff.

That Man will call me to his office Tell me I write just like novices. He'll shout He'll rave! I'll shake with fear He'll throw me out right on my ear.

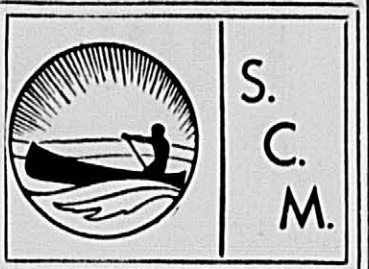

Now, I'll fool That Man the editor Yes, I'll do just as I've done before Now I'll send him word that I've gone home. And he'll have to write his own darn poem field of mortal combat—the young Sir Galahads!

Hush! hush! . . .

I was in the Supreme Court of State Judicial District 1 last Friday. We were to report on the proceedings, and that's how I learned what happens when ex-lovers get together and battle it out in a suit for separation. What I quote below will show better than I can describe just how kindly the two felt toward one another; not how impersonal the testimony, how refined the language!

"He grabbed the elevator door and slammed the thing against my hand" . . . I said to him: "Why does Mrs. X keep phoning you every day?" He said: "It's just business" . . . "He rushed at me with his eyes blazing like a mad animal and yelled: 'You're trying to bulldoze me!' . . . 'I did tell him he needed education on how to treat a woman properly' . . . 'He called me a frequenter of Parisian dives with other men, and an adventures' . . . 'When he refused to read 'Married Love' and threw it at me, I called him an old fool and told him he was dead from the neck up."

Why all this? She wanted alimony; he didn't want to give her any. Do you get it? Don't kick me, I admit it's feeble!

Diner—"I beg your pardon, but why do all these girls stare at me?" Waitress—"I'm not supposed to tell you, sir, but we got some of our food from the school cookery and home economics, next door, and if you get sick after that omelet you've just eaten those girls have failed in their examination."
